EL PASO HERALD

auccession, The Daily News, The Telegraph, The Telegram, The Tribune,
The Graphic, The Sun, The Advertiser, The Independent,
The Journal, The Republican, The Bulletin.

MEMBER ASSOCIATED PRESS AND AMER. NEWSP. PUBLISHERS' ASSOC. Entered at the Postoffice in El Paso, Tex., as Second Class, Matter.

Dedicated to the service of the people, that no good cause shall lack a champion, and that evil shall not thrive unopposed.

The Daily Herald is issued six days a week and the Weekly Herald is published every Thursday, at El Paso, Texas; and the Sunday Mail Edition is also sent to Weekly Subscribers.

TELEPHONES.

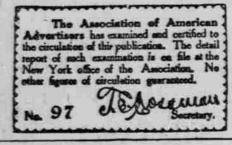

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. Daily Herald, per month, 60c; per year, $7.00. Weekly Herald, per year, $2.00.

The Daily Herald is delivered by carriers in El Paso, East El Paso, Fort Bliss and Towne, Texas, and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, at 60 cents a month.

A subscriber destring the address on his paper changed will please state in his communication both the old and the new address.

Subscribers failing to get The Herald promptly should call at the office or telephone No. 115 before 6:30 p. m. All complaints will receive prompt atten-

WARANTEED CIRCULATION. The Herald bases advertising all advertising contracts on a guarantee of more than twice the circulation of any other El Paso, Arizona, New Mexico or West Texas paper. Daily average per. Daily average exceeding 10,000.

HERALD TRAV-ELING AGENTS. Persons solicited to subscribe for The Herald should beware of impos-ters and should not pay money to anyone unless he can show that he is legally author-ized by the El Paso Herald.

Avoiding Double Taxation

SECTION which the New Mexico constitution makers might with great advantage insert in the fundamental law of the new state is a provision to exempt from taxation all loans or evidences of loans upon real estate mortgage security. The essential fairness of such exemption is obvious to every intelligent man who stops to think about the subject of taxation as affected by the laws usually prevailing. The owner of property is supposed to render his property at full value, taking no account of any deferred payments he may still owe. The creditor holding this man's paper secured by a mortgage on the property already taxed is required by law to render the amount of such loan for taxation and subject this mere paper evidence of capital invested to a second mulcting by the state and local tax authorities.

This so plainly constitutes double taxation that it would seem as if argument were unnecessary, and the worst feature about it is that the borrower must finally pay the tax. A creditor will not submit to gouging of this sort because he does not have to. The man who borrows money pays all costs, including those imposed by the tax gatherers. Such a system of double taxation as exists in this state and in almost every state in the union simply makes it harder for men to borrow money

If the New Mexico constitution makers desire a model after which to pattern in instituting this very desirable reform, it may be found in the constitution of Louisiana, which is one of the very few states to have taken this sensible and advanced view of the proper objects of taxation. The following is the constitutional amendment adopted in Louisiana two years ago covering this point:

In addition to the property now exempted from taxation by existing laws, there shall also be exempt from taxation loans made upon the security of mortgages granted upon real estate situated in this state, as well as the mortgages granted to secure the said nans, and the notes, bonds or other written instruments evidencing the said leans, whether in the hands of the mortgagee, or his or their transferees; and all loans made by life insufance companies to their policyholders, upon the sole security of policies held by the borrower in the company making the loans, as well as all notes or other written instruments, evidencing such loans; provided, that in the case of loans upon policies of life insurance, as aforesaid, the rate of interest charged upon such loans does not exceed five percent (5%) per annum discount.

Such action on the part of Louisiana establishes it indisputably as one of the most progressive states in the union

Pennsylvania is one of the states in which first degree murder must carry the death penalty and the juries have no discretion as to life imprisonment for this crime. Such a rule in this section would simply result in turning more murderers loose, for juries seem increasingly disinclined to pronounce the death penalty, even in the most flagrant cases.

The lawyers of Las Cruces ask the constitutional convention to establish county courts, the county judges to be "men learned in the law." It might also be well to require that they understand and speak English without an interpreter. It seems too bad that an English sperking American cannot even probate a will in some counties in New Mexico without hiring an interpreter to present his case to the Spanish speaking judge.

We may all flout the idea that we are dependent on Wall street for our financial and business health; but it is to be noticed that the whole country leaps at the first suggestion of returning activity on the stock exchange following the stagnation of recent months. An active stock market may not be a cause of national activity and prosperity, but it is generally regarded as a pretty good indication of business health; the psychological effect of activity or depression in Wall street is felt in the remotest communities of the United States and without doubt affects the feeling of the people generally and the working out of their plans. Just now there are evidences of a distinctly better tone in New York financial and investment circles, and the whole country begins to breathe more easily as a result.

Eliminations From Forest Reserves

N January 1, under an order just issued, 383 square miles are to be eliminated from the Alamo national forest, lying east of Alamogordo, N. M. The addition of 35 square miles chiefly valuable for forest use has already taken effect. The large area to be eliminated has been determined upon careful survey to be more valuable for agriculture and grazing than for present or future forest use. The eliminated area covers most of the comparatively barren strip along the railroad and foothills north and northeast of Alamogordo up to the line

The elimination is strictly in line with the established policy of the forest service to withdraw large areas where it seems desirable to conserve forest covering and then after withdrawal to institute thorough surveys with a view to rectifying the lines of reserved territory. These withdrawals have been taking place steadily all over the west, and the consistent following out of this policy will go far to disarm much of the criticism heretofore directed against the forest service by stock raisers, agriculturists and would be homesteaders, who could never understand the reasons for the temporary inclusion of large barren areas in socalled

The truth is these areas are now for the first time being thoroughly surveyed and classified, and it was far better that the original withdrawals should be too extensive rather than too meager. It is easy to let go what is not needed, but it would have been difficult to extend the lines of many forest reserves if the original withdrawals had been too scant.

If even half the things were true that the opposing party politicians are saying about each other, this blooming old republic wouldn't last 20 minutes.

A note of wisdom from the state railroad commissioner of Iowa. He has seen a great light, and he is not at all selfish about reflecting the refulgent ray. Says he, "The railroads and the people should have a better understanding and be fair to each other. People want and ought to have safety. There should be more double tracks, better depots, better service, and better connections. Iowa should adopt a systematic policy of eliminating dangerous grade crossings. The freight rates should be increased, if necessary, to follow out this policy." This remark is in striking contrast to the attitude of the average corporation-baiting legislature and state executive; the too common rule in the state governments is to enact two or three dozen laws the ultimate effect of which is greatly to increase the cost of railroad operations, and then on top of that orgie of demagogic excess  start an agitation for 2 cent passenger fares and cheaper freight rates.

TNCLE WALTS Denatured Poem

TOW sad, distraught and melancholy, must be the man whose would-be jolly angravings jar the press! The more he tries to entertain me, the more, ods fishhooks! does he pain me, and add to my distress. His pictures always make me restive; when they're not flat they are suggestive of things good men disdain; in shady things he likes to wallow, and those who would his footsteps follow run chances of a stain. Without respect for man or woman, he's fond of monsters superhuman, distorted things and base; he mocks the list of human-tribe ills, and draws his grim and ghastly libels upon the mortal face. O, I can sit upon a casket, and pile men's bones into a basket, and find more fun in that, than I can find in daily viewing the "comic" pictures which are stewing in rubbish coarse and flat. Bring forth some artists clean and clever, some healthy-minded chaps who never see humor in the vile! O, let them illustrate the capers of normal people, in the papers, and then just watch us smile!

COMIC PICTURES

Copyright, 1910, by George Matthews Adams.

Wall Mason

Beatrice Fairfax Says Marry Young; Don't Wait.

who is many years her senior she marries for money, for a ieme or because she is afraid she may be an old maid. In fact, she marries he, annot fall in love with an old man. union. Sometimes a girl gets a silly idea into her head that her ideal man must be middle aged and blase; must have tried | see it. every side of life and grown weary of in all mankind, especially womankind.

The romantic little goose thinks that been in marrying a girl of his own age she will marry him and restore his Women Age Quickly. faith. She never thinks how her young spirit will rebel against his years and his lack of enthusiasm. Cannot Restore Youth.

years of your own age. A man who will still have enough spirit and go in him to enjoy fun and the natural pleas-No old man can come back to your outhful plane. You will have to go to his, and be an old woman before your All the comforts and riches in the world won't compensate for what you must give up if you marry a man old nough to be your father. Marry young, even if you have to conomize and wear your hats two seaons. It's all worth while if you have the man you love by your side.

Old men are all right in their proper place, but that place is not by the side girl friends to look at. Which wife of a young wife. of a young wife.

You very rarely hear of men marrying women who are much their seniors, but occasionally a foolish boy falls in love with a woman 10 years older than for any other reason than the one him promptly about his business, for it stands to reason that a young girl she realizes the absurdity of such a support fall in lave with the one him promptly about his business, for she realizes the absurdity of such a support fall in lave with the one him promptly about his business.

The boy is infatuated, and will not see it for himself; he must be forced to He may marry her and make an +cit; must be cynical and have lost faith cellent husband, but he will never be as ecstatically happy as he would have Women Age Quickly.

Women age more quickly than mer, and it is both pathetic and ridiculous to watch a middle aged wife trying to keep her eye on a frisky young hus-The man to marry is one within ten band. Men and women should marry young. They should enjoy their youth together. Responsibility is good for men and the knowledge that he has a wife and children dependent on him ennobles and develops the man who otherwise might amount to but little. My advice to all young people is marry and marry young. I don't mean that a man should marry unless he is willing to work for his wife and feels that he can support her. But don't feel that you must start in where your parents left off.

He may have to give up a few pet luxuries, but a good wife is the greatest luxury of all.

Here are two pictures for my little

THE ARTIST The Herald's Daily Short Story By Radcliffe Martin.

SWALD CURTIS sat amongst a TURE.—Those who remember Mr. Os-an order to a canvasser for a new kind. lady of his acquaintance. A wealthy young New Zealander who affairs. You're all old pals, and I think that I owe all of you money."

There was a general murmur of as
There was a general murmur of as-

"Now I want to pay every one of you, but these pictures won't sell." Higgins, who is a member of the New York Art club, glanced round at the array of canvases and shook his Brook drank off his whisky to give courage for an agonizing moment, and then said boldly: "Look here, Oswald, I'm sure that none of us care twopence about the trifle you owe us, We're willing to lend more if you'll take it. But if you want specially to raise money just now and won't borrow. I say sell your frames. must be thirty yards of good framing in this place. "That wouldn't help," said Oswald "My frame-maker is a grand old fellow, and if I did get anything for the frames I should think it a moral obligation to pay him first. But I'll tell you what I want to sell a You know that I went down into the country this summer to work out an idea I had for a picture of Circe turning men into swine. of course, I put up at a farm house, so that I could have plenty of pigs for There were some Americans staying in the neighborhood hunting up their pedigree-a father and a daughter, Col. and Mary Waterson. got very sweet on Mary Waterson whilst I was down there, and-well, anyhow, she didn't object to it. When I spoke to her father he was nice lough in one way. He told me straight that though he'd a pot of money he didn't object to me because I was a poor man. He'd been poor enough himself, even though now he was head of the Chewing Gum trust. And Mary would have money enough for But the colonel said to me: 'I care about the dollars only 1 want some proof that you can make good. You've been spending your time painting pictures; well, sell some to convince me that you're not of no ac count. Anyone can make a thing, but it takes a derned good man to sell it afterwards. Just you show me that you've got some jump in you, and I'll let Mary have her own way."

Mosby coughed in rather an embarrassed manner. "Now look here," continued Oswald, "I want you fellows to think it over, and scheme out some way in which we can create a demand for my pictures. I promise you in return that when I'm married I won't paint any more. Now I don't want any underhand scheming to buy pictures yourselves. What I want is an idea that will bring me a genuine purchaser." Pawson and Brook arose together. They were conscious that their respective newspapers needed their pres-

That night as Brook sat in his office at the Daily Wire he was disgusted poor stories the staff brought heaven's sake, look at this!" "If only I could make some of you understand that this is a live paper, and not a parish magazine," he groan-ed. "We've stories enough of a sort, were going to write him up?" said Pawbut they lack the human note."

And at that moment temptation and the thought of Oswald Curtis came into his head together. He seized me?" some flimsy, scribbled wildly for a "Neve few moments, and then said to an of- office." "Here, get me a proof of next morning he read with much in- suppose your proprietor will grumble ward satisfaction a paragraph on the Mire never does unless he's run into ROMANCE OF AN ACADEMY PIC-cheerful group of friends in his studio. They all looked at Os- "The Murderess"—and who does not?— "The Murderess"—and who does not?— will be interested to hear of a rowald, who was the best fellow in the will be interested to hear of a ro-world, and none of them looked at mance which attaches to that magnifihis paintings, which were the worst cent work of art. The striking figure paintings in the world. "Have some more whisky, you fellows," said Oswald. "It isn't very good, because my regular man won't give me any more credit, and I had to give an order to a canyasser for a new kind.

every day, and stood conspicuous amongst the admiring crowds that al- and the voting was viva voce. ways surrounded the picture. At last The continental songress after the he contrived to obtain the artist's pri- close of the war had been treated with vate address and since he has haunted slight consideration and generally was where there were 18 Federalists and 12 jury in an election contest, artist, though sympathizing very keenly with the youth, has not yet felt justified in giving hen any hint as to the identity of the lady-even though the impassioned lover has threatened to commit suicide. "Good," murmured lay their attendance, so that more than Brook to himself; "it gets the studio a month was wasted in vain efforts to discontinuous address in beautifully. That's a nice obtain a quorum. North Carolina and the first time went into battle with and cities can vote on local option. touch, too, about his 'last Academy picture." No one would presume that it was his first."

He called a taxi, and whirled off to Curtis's studio. He met Pawson at the door as he alighted. "Isn't it a glorious ad?" he cried proudly "Glad you like it, old man! I rather prided myself upon it."

"You!" exclaimed Brook.

"Yes, you might have guessed that I did it. I made up my mind to help old Curtis, so I scribbled a par or so. I'm just taking him the paper. Ten to one he's never seen it yet. He never reads the paper except there's some special cricket on

Brook snatched the paper from his hand and read:

A Libel in a Picture.

That promising young artist, Mr. Oswald Curtis, whose masterpiece, "The Murderess," is reported to be under the consideration of the Chantrey trustees, is at present involved in curious difficulty. The model for the strikingly handsome figure which thrilled all beholders, was a wellknown society lady-a charming widow with a very large circle of ac-quaintances. Mr. Curtis originally intended to paint her as Lady Macbeth, and she sat for him on that understanding. However, at the last me ment, before the picture was sent to the Academy, an acute critic pointed out that the face of the model, though beautiful and highly dramatic, was far too modern to realize one's idea of Lady Macbeth. So the artist hurriedly altered the title to "The Murderess."

When his model discovered that all her friends identified her as the original of the picture and that in her of courtship. own circle she was playfully spoken of as the murderess, she was seriously annoyed, and instructed her solicitors to take proceedings for libel. It is to be hoped, though, for the sake of the charming model, and of the most promising of English artists, that the case will not have to be fought out in

'Ripping, isn't it?" said Pawson, as he watched Brook's face. "Oh, it's good enough; but for

And he handed Pawson the paragraph from the Live Wire. son, as he read the story of the impasstoned New Zealander.

"For that matter, why didn't you tell "Never occurred to me till I got to the "Same here. But it'll make poor old Curtis a laughing stock. It doesn't As he breakfasted at 11 ocleck the matter much about our papers. I don't

(Continued on next page)

The Formation Of Parties

II-CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGNS.

that did not arise to the dignity of a the nature of an experiment.

ment almost entirely disappeared.

Small Quarrel Starts It.

was intolerable. Efforts to induce the state legislatures to grant the continental congress power to control the tariff and to regulate commerce, had

But in the Virginia legislature Mr.

Madison brought up the case of the Al-exandria wharfmaster and the foreign shipmaster and succeeded in procuring authorization for a conference of Maryland and Virginia representatives for the establishment of mutual commer-cial regulations. This conference, moved to Mount Vernon, decided to in-vite the other central states-Penn-called a constitutional convention

Fight on Ratification.

two parties, these urging its adoption taking the name of Federalists and those in opposition that of anti-Federalists. By the middle of the summer

When the constitution was submit-met at Alexandria and later proved unsuccessful.

the American republic.

which

By Frederic J. Haskin

chosen in a haphazard fashion tors and 65 representatives in the first congress which sat in New York in the

have the nabit of believing that their political world was called into being by a constitutional flat in the year ed by legislatures which had ratified the constitution, were Federalists. Fif-ty-three of the 65 representatives also 1787. Important as that constitution has become in later years, sacred as it now is, the people of the country in were Federalists, but in the house there was a tiny minority of 12 anti-Federalists who had been elected 1788 gave it no reverence and were persuaded with difficulty to accept it in chiefly because they had been opposed to the adoption of the constitution. It During the long quarrel between the people of the American colonies and soon became apparent, however, that the English king, the colonists were the new experiment was worthy of a fair trial and opposition to the condivided into two parties bearing the English names of Whig and Tory. The stitution soon completely disappeared. The new constitution having been Whigs were the aggressive patriots and the Tories were the conservative accepted, but human nature not having been revolutionized, the political clans and cautious loyalists. When the revolution came the Wuigs were patrix's again divided on the question of how and the Tories were proscribed and the constitution ought to be interand the Tories were proscribed and despised traitors. After the colonies had won the war and had become thirteen independent republican states but with a new meaning. The Federalunited only by that "rope of cant" the ists were those who believed in a Articles of Confederation, the Tories strong central government and a loose were driven into exile or compelled to or broad construction of the constituabstain from political activity. Then tion, while the anti-Federalists were the Whig party divided upon questions tenacious of the gights of the states of confederation policy. But for the and demanded strict construction of most part the people were selfish ad-herents to local state interests and ington feared the division of the people into hostile political camps and did his best to keep down political agithe shadow of a confederate govern-He invited into his cabinet Alexander Hamilton, foremost among A foreign shipmaster whose ressel the broad constructionists, and Thomwas at anchor in the Potomac river, as Jefferson, the leader of the strict under the jurisdiction of Maryland, had constructionists. But this administra-tive act could not prevent a division of a quarrel with the wharfmaster at Alexandria in Virginia. His ship was opinion in the congress which discharging and taking on cargo at charged with the business of making Alexandria, and yet he was acting unstatutory provisions for the establish-

First "Off Year" Campaign.

When the time came to choose the members of the second congress there was a great deal more public interest than had been manifested in the first election, and this-the first "off" year campaign—resulted in the election of 55 Federalists and 14 anti-Federal-The Federalist victory was complete, but the senate showed a change of sentiment that presaged the oming division, there being 17 Federalists and 13 anti-Federalists in the upper house. In the first congress the senate had ben solidly Federalist, in the second congress that party had a majority of but two.

sylvania, New Jersey and Delaware-to subscribe to the same system of commercial treaties. Out of this grew The Federalists acknowledged the personal leadership of Hamilton, while the opposition was captained by Mr. the Annapolis convention which in turn Jefferson, who soon abandoned the titile of anti-Federalist and gave his which submitted to the people of the following the name of Democratic-Republican party. The members of the states that document which created party usually shortened this name to republican," but the Federalists in derveer to issue warrants for the arderision always called their opponents rest of offenders if the nuisance in the "Democrats." In the fullness of time district is not removed by Saturday. ed, the people at once divided into the name given in derision was adoptthe name given in derision was adopted in pride, just as the appellation "Christian," and the party dropped the of warrants. In the application the deco-title "Republican" and ever since fendants were charged with misde-has been known as the Democratic party. The word Republican was first dropped generally in 1824, but remained in use in many states until 1850. senators, and presidential electors were selected—in five states by the

He was present at the Academy was a statewide election day. Most of time, the Federalists were defeated, the the elections continued for three days Democrats returning 54 members of the good reason to believe that the mass of 1794 the Federalists made violent by jury. of the people expected the new experi- efforts to gain control of the lower . In the case of J. B. Durrett vs. J. ment in government to succeed. The house of congress, but were not sucsenators and representatives elected cessful, the Democrats increasing their county, the court held the commissionto congress were so careless as to de- majority from three to 13.

THE first congress of the United Rhode Island had not yet come into general campaign. Americans seem :6 spring of 1789.

Senators All Federalists. All of the senators, having been elect-der the authority of Maryland law in ing of the machinery of the new govdefying the Virginia authorities 30 ernment. feet away. This condition of affairs

Abe Martin

O' all th' snips a feller that tells th' things his wife hears is th' worst. Miss Fawn Lippincut is in Joplin, Missouri, gatherin' atmosphere fer a Indianny the presidency at stake, the Federalists supporting John Adams and the Democrats, Thomas Jefferson. There were then 16 states and the presidential electors were chosen by the legislatures in 10 of them. Adams was elected president, but the Federalists were unable to capture the house of representatives, 54 Democrats and 51 Federalists being elected. The Federalists were successful in state legislative contests, however, and increased their majority in the senate, having 21 as against 11 Democrats.

the Democratic electoral votes had been massed Adams would have been defeated. The knowledge of this fact and the possession of a slight ad-vantage in the house of representa-tives caused the Democrats to view with suspicion every act of the adminstration. Adams's utter lack of tact contributed to Democratic distrust. istration. Thus it came about that the party division was made absolute and Federalists and Democrats began to hate each other. Then came the first great political campaign of our history.

Tomorrow-The Campaign of 1798.

COURT ASKED TO MAKE

OFFICIALS ENFORCE THE LAW Seattle, Wash, Oct. 26.—The crim-inal branch of the superior court refused to issue the 1000 warrants asked for by the Public Welfare league for the arrest of mayor Hiram Gill, chief of police Wappenstein and owners and occupants of the King street "vice dis-trict." Judge J. C. Donald ruled that as to the mayor and chief of police he ance.

The proceedings today were separ-Federalists Meet Defeat.

In 1792 Washington was reelected against the mayor and others, which president, being supported both by the

TWO TEXAS ELECTION CASES

Austin, Texas, Oct. 26 .- The supreme court today in a written opinion in the house, as against 51 Federalists, giving case of Hammond vs. Ash, from Harhis studio in Glenthorne Gardens. The held in open contempt. There is no Democrats. In the 'off' year election the contestant not entitled to a trial

> D. Robinson, district judge of Bell ers' court has no right to create new In 1796, Gen. Washington having re- districts for local option territory and

Ella Wheeler Wilcox On Little Foxes On Domestic Vines

Copyright, 1910, by the New York Evening Journal Publishing Company.

UNLESS a woman is utterly de- | it is the simplest of matters for the man she loves to make her happy after marriage.

A little tact, a little self-denial, a little patience, much consideration, many small attentions, and unfailing kindness will keep the average woman as happy as her days are long. But in spite of the simplicity of the undertaking, the world is filled with domestic failures; and the discontented | agreeable. and disappointed wives seem to outnumber the satisfied ones.

Most men begin married life with more real love in their hearts than most women bestow upon their husbands: yet, after a few years of domestic life it is the woman who gives, and the man who seems to fall in stowing the proofs of affections which are so necessary to the happiness of most women.

Where Men Fail.

The leading desire of a woman's heart is to feel always, and under all circumstances, that she is first in her husband's thoughts. The next desire is to feel that he likes to be with her; that he enoys her society, and that he comes to her joyfully, and goes from her regretfully, even as in the days It is just in these two matters that so many men fall. Most decent men give their wives dutiful attentions. They provide for their wants, and are anxious to have them entertained: but too frequently they are satisfied to provide amusement and entertainment which does not necessitate their personal participation. A woman who had received an expensive New Year gift was, nevertheless, made unhappy by having her husband sit in an absent-minded manner through the dinner hour with friends. and to hear him ask to be excused as soon as decency allowed, and to see him hurry away to watch the old year out and the new in at his club. Her unhappiness over this incident seemed unreasonable to him; yet had e given her that hour of his undiided attention and shown pleasure in taving her at his side as the New Year came in, he could have finished the night with his club and left no carring memory on the heart of the oman he had chosen from all the world to be his companion.

It required only a little self-denial and a little tact to make this one wife happy. Tenderness and Tact.

Unless a woman is obsessed by the demon of jealousy, which makes her incapable of sane reasoning and good judgment, she does not object to having her husband show other women gallant and gracious attentions. She is indeed proud of him when other women admire him and find his society

But in order for any woman to take this view of life, the man must be tender and tactful enough to make his wife feel ALWAYS that she stands first in his heart.

He must look in her eyes when she is talking to him; not past her to gaze at some other; he must see her when she enters a room and come to meet her; he must not forget her presence and sit or stand with his back to her while he entertains some other woman; and he must be as ready and quick to praise his wife as he is to praise others. Cause for Jealousy.

When a man springs quickly to the defense of another woman, who is criticised in any manner, and at the same time is prone to think his own wife needs criticism, he must not be surprised if she exhibits what is commonly called "Jealousy.

The tactful man can and will avoid such situations by keeping his wife confident of her power to charm and please him; and whenever he goes from her presence he will make her feel that he goes regretfully.

There are men who treat their wives as good hearted boy's treat their mothers when they first develop into young

A husband of this type tries to do this duty by his wife; he looks after her comfort; he sees that she has some one to help her pass the time; he gets theater tickets for her and her friends, and then he joyfully hurries away to find his own pleasures, just as the boy hurries off to his comrades and his girl friends after being sure that he has neglected no duty toward his Mothers and Wives.

But while the mother is satisfied with this kind of attention the wife is not-not unless she has ceased to care for her physical comforts, and unless I she, too, has other pleasures more 3385.

congenial than her husband's society

I have seen a woman who possessed every earthly blessing and who was envied by her friends because her husband came to her directly after business hours with some plan for her entertainment, and seemed always solicitous about having her enjoy her-

Yet he found all his pleasures at the club or in entertainments apart from her. When she complained to him that she felt lonely and dissatisfied with her life he thought her most unreasonable and unappreciative of a good husband.

Did he not do his duty better than most men of her acquaintance? He could not understand that a quiet evening at home, where he seemed to be happy and contented because he was with her, would have meant more to her than all the pleasure he provided her apart from him.

Alas, when it takes SO LITTLE to make a woman happy (a loving and reasonable woman), how needlessly sad it seems that so many women are unhappy.

Judge Newcomb returned to Las Cruces yesterday.

A. Krakauer, of San Antonio, came in town yesterday from the east. Whitelaw Reid, who passed last winter in Phoenix for his health, will return directly after the election.

A large congregation welcomed Rev. H. W. Moore, the new pastor at the Presbyterian church. The smelter Republicans have nominated E. Wall Kipp for justice, and E. Parker for constable.

The McGinty band will hold its regular weekly practice Wednesday night, next, owing to the engagement tolight in the opera house.

The cement shipped by New Orleans from England for the Selden dam, is en route to El Paso over the G. H. The reception at St Clement's rectory next Thursday night will be especially to those friends who assisted it the recent rectory fire. Rev. F. Corbin leaves this afternoon for Fort Worth with his two daughters to place them in school.

The vote of the county is given below, as estimated by a careful observer; Camp Schryver, 50; Van Horn, 75; Sierra Blanca, 40; Fort Hencock, 90; Quadrilla, 30; The Island, 30; San Elizario, 450; Towne, 225; Clint, 20; Secorro, 225; El Paso, 1800. Total,